Klasse Klima

GERMANY BERLIN

Klasse Klima is student-led collective, based in Berlin University of the Arts, pushing for art and design education to address today's climate crisis. In 2019 the group started a seminar to learn about the crisis and ecological forms of coexistence. It also explores how artists and designers can help create a new paradigm, by raising awareness, helping to imagine sustainable futures, translating abstract concepts into objects and experiences and connecting different perspectives and visions. In two years, hundreds of students, activists, researchers and scientists have taken part in the discussions. The aim now is to expand this network, beyond borders, to document and connect existing knowledge and initiatives. The main tool is a self-developed, self-hosted, solar-powered digital platform, where an increasing amount of art and design schools can share resources and projects at anytime and from anywhere. A website will be added to present content and foster discussion around sustainable transition with the public.
