MOBILISATION OF CULTURE, ARTS AND COMMUNITIES

Barcelona is animated by many events that often have an impact on the environment, in terms of resource and energy use, waste production and greenhouse gas emissions. “Spaces to reconnect citizens with cities” is a project to create a zero-impact toolkit and forward green transition in the events industry. The toolkit will take into account social inclusion, waste management, local and sustainable sourcing, and promote circular and local economy. It also provides the methodology to create a partnership network that increases its potential by including actors and stakeholders needed to pursue the objectives. Citizens will also be encouraged to provide feedback on a pilot zero-impact event that will be organised with Posidonia Green Festival in Barcelona. Based on this research and experimentation, the resulting toolkit will summarize best practices and methods and provide guidelines any event organizer can then use to design their own zero-impact events.
